TEE-DEE WANT ADS ARE THE FAMILY FRIENDS. THEY TELL THINGS SAID AND DONE IN THE CAPITAL CITY

Check-Harlan's Hatred of the Cigarette.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, D. C., August 8.-"I cannot for the life of me see that the negro plank in the Republican platform can be made to mean anything except the desire of the party to punish the people of the South who have, by constitutional means, succeeded in eliminating the negro voter from the electorate. said Hon. Benjamin Grubb Humphreys, member of Congress from the Third Mississippi District, in this city to-day. "It says, in effect, that the Republican party, if retained in power, proposes to punish us for violating the Fifteenth Amendus for violating the Fifteenth Amendment by enforcing the penalties of the Fourteenth. Why does it not proceed under the law to enforce the Fifteenth, which we are told has been made a dead letter? It is absurd to talk of proceeding under a prior amendment to inflict punishment upon 'he people of the South when it is claimed that another amendment has been violated, and no attempt is made to enforce it. The plank will probably be found valuable in getting the negro vote for Rossevelt in the doubtful States of the North, but nothing will be heard of the Republican pledge after the election." after the election."

Democrats are not united in taking this

Democrats are not united in taking this view of the negro plank which the Republicans adopted at Chicago. It has been predicted by some that one of the first acts of Mr. Roosevelt, after the convening of Congress in 196, if he should be elected, would be to have the Republican leaders to see him and force them to comply with his policy of reducing the Southern representation in Congress and the electoral college. This latter view is probably correct. Mr. Roosevelt has given so many evidences of his desire to humiliate the South and to perpetuate the power of the Republican party that it can scarcely be doubted that he will issist upon literal enforcement of the pro-negro declaration of the Chicago platform.

The defeat of Hon. Rice A. Pierce for Chicago platform.

The defeat of Hon. Rice A. Pierce for renomination for Congress from the Ninth Tennessee District means that in the next Congress there will be no ex-Confederate from Tennessee in the House of Representatives. Mr. Pierce was the oldest member on the Democratic side in point of service, having been elected in 1884. He was retired for two torms, and then came back in 1890. He has seen every member of his political faith who was on the floor retire, and now he must give way to a younger man. Finis Garrett, the man who defeated Representative Pierce for the nomination, is a brilliant lawyer. He is not yet thirty. With this Congress, Major J. D. Richardson, who was at one time leader of the minority on the floor of the House, will retire to devote his time to working for the upbuilding and general prosperity for the upbuilding and general prosperity of the Scottish Rite Masons, southern of the Scottish Rite Masons, southern jurisdiction.

The only soldier of the Lost Cause in the Tennessee delegation in Congress will then be Senator William B. Bate, who successfully opposed the efforts of former Governor Benton McAillian to control the next Legislature. Mr. McMillin has withdrawn from the contest, and General Bate will have no Democratic opposition. General Bate was a majorgeneral in the Confederate service, and was one of the bravest men in the army. He was three times left on the field for dead. He is the idol of Tennesseoans. He was born in 1826, served in the Mexican war, throughout the war between the State. He was elected to the Senate in 1851.

President Roosevelt has for many years

State. He was elected to the Senate in 1837.

President Roosevelt has for many years been an ardent admirer of the character of William Gannaway Brownlow, War Governor of Tennensee, and after the war United States senator from that State. Governor Grownlow was an Minerant preacher of the Methodist Church, and is best known to the people of Tennesses as "Parson" Brownlow. He was essentially a fighter, and for many years prior to the war preached and talked so strongly against all hat looked to disurion that he became very unpopular in a State where the majority of the people were in favor of secusion if the South did not receive what they thought to be justice at the hands of the national government. During the war he was a most active partisan of the Union side of the controversy, and he often had to maintain his opinions in the face of intense personal opposition, and was frequently in danger of losing his life. Living was strenuous for him, but his devotion to the Union was never questioned, though it frecuently required considerable courage for him to assert his opinions. President Roosevelt has achieved reputation as an advocate of the strenuous life, and naturally finds in the career of the rugged Tennesseean much that is attractive. When the President was on his Southern trip in the apring of 1962 he spent a short time in Knoxville. The elite of the city pressed him to accept invitations to luncheon, but he declined them all, declaring that he would only be in the city long enough to pay a call on the aged widow of Governor Brownlow. Mrs. Brownlow is very far advanced in the suburbs. She is in fairly comfortable circumstances, though, from both necessity and choice, she lives very platriy. The old lady was considerably flustrated when a messenger arrived to President Roosevelt has for many years necessity and choice, she lives very platriy. The old lady was considerably flustrated when a messenger arrived to inform her that the President of the United States was on his way to call an her. It was the first intimation which she had that Mr. Roosevelt was to honor her with a visit.

She hastened into her room and changed her dress, and then came back to the little parlor to receive her visitor. She went to the window and saw the President's carriage stop at her gate. As she turned away, her rather dimmed eyes fell upon her skirt, and she saw that in her haste she had put it on wrong side outwards.

"But it was too late to change it then," said Mrs. Brownlow, "for the President was at the door. So I received him as I was, and I am certain that he pover noticed it."

Mrs. Brownlow is probably correct, for Mr. Roosevelt has never been heard to mention the incident.

When Judge Roger A. Pryor—they call him General Pryor down in Virginia—went to New York, soon after he left the Confederate army in 1855, he found it no easy task to make a living. There was plenty of business for the lawyers, but it was hard for him to get his share. He was frequently hard up, and sometimes almost completely discouraged.

"One afternoon I was altting in my office completely cast down," said Judge Pryor recently. "I hadn't a case on which I could work and base hopes of necessity and choice, she lives very plainly. The old lady was considerably

A Mississippian's View of the Negro Plank—When Judge Pryor Received His First Check—Harlan's Hatred getting some money, and I was without any mency whatever. I finally decided that I would write to a friend in Richmond and borrow a sum sufficient to tide mo over a few weeks, and trust to luck to get enough to repay him. Just as I reached this decision there was a knock to get enough to repay him. Just as I reached this decision there was a knock at the door, and a young man entered. After I had assured him that I was General Proor he said he had been directed by a ceriain well known firm of lawyers to come to me with a view to engaging my services in the conduct of a case in which the firm by which he was employed had become involved. We discussed the features of the case, and I told him I thought I could win it.

"I thope we can make the fee satisfactory to you," said the young mar.

"I think we can arrange that," I replied, and at the same time I was wondering whether I should charge him twenty-five dollars or fifty dollars. It was greatly in need of fifty dollars, but, I thought, he might be scared away if I proposed such a price, so I had better say twenty-five. That sum would be a Godsend. While I was thinking the young man arose to his feet and took a check from his pocketbook.

"Do you think this will be a sufficient sim as a retainer?" he asked, placing the check on the desk in front of me. I was given the check for the firm which recommended me to you, and they have endorsed it."

"The check was for five thousand dol-

"The check was for live thousand doilars. I had hoped for, fifty, and would have been satisfied with twenty-five.
"'The amount is satisfactory.' I repiled, in as even tones as I could assume. But when the young man was gone I think there were something like tears on my face."

Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar, as-Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar, as Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar, associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of Progress Centerior in the Cabinet of Progress and a colonel of Confederate cavalry from Georgia, was not a man noted for his humor, though of a genial nature. There is a lady now living in Washington who recalls an instance of Justice Lamar's humor, which has never appeared in type. Soon after his appointment to Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet as Secretary of the Interior, he went to look at the furnished house of the lady mentioned, with a view to leasing it. The residence, located on K Street, in the most fashionable section of the city, greatly pleased Colonel Lamar, for it was furnished in the richest style, in addition to being so pleasantly located. The lady who showed him over it desired to lense it while she and her husband spent two years abroad. After having inspected the beautiful home from cellar to attle, and returned to the from cellar to attle, and returned to the from cellar to attic, and returned to the parlor, Colonel Lamar asked the lady her terms.

"We hope to receive five thousand dollars a year for the house," she replied, and made some further remark concerning the low rental of such an elegant home, furnished. Colonel Lamar did not reply for a minute or two, and finally the lady asked;

"What are you thinking of?"

"I was just wondering," said Colonel Lamar, in an abstracted way, "what I should do with that other three thousand dollars of my salary."

sand dollars of my salary."

should do with that other three thousand dollars of my salary."

Mr. Justice Harian, of the United States Supreme Court, is noted for his haired of the cigarette. Of an eminently judicial turn of mind, Justice Harian is little short of vindictive where the cigarette is concerned, and he would not claim that he is capable of an Impartial decision in such a case.

Justice Harian is one of the lecturers in the law school of Columbian University in this city, and the students have had most deeply Impressed upon them his antipathy to cigarettes. It is so well recognized that they will not smoke in the class room before he comes in to address them. Once or twice there has been a student with sufficient remerity to take a few whiffs of his cigarette before the Justice, and invariably there has been a sniffing of the judicial nose, and some comments upon the habit of cigarette smoking. One night recently a student, who had not been long in the class, smoked his cigarette before the lecture began, and when Justice Harlan entered the young fellow continued to puff away, some distance away from the desk.

Justice Harlan did not at once make any comment. He looked leisurely over the one hundred and fifty young men before him, and then said:

"The greatest mystery I have encountered in my later life is that some civilized men will form the habit of smoking cigarettes."

cigarettes."
There was a howl of delight from the students, and the smoker promptly threw the stump into the cuspidor.
